AMENDED ORDER

The court is hereby amending its April 2, 2002 Order as follows:

A. The '435 Patent

6. Regarding the terms “first inclined position” and “second inclined position,” first inclined position” and “second inclined position” describe positions of the second child support member relative to the first child support member, with the second inclined position being the more upright. In the first inclined position the second child support member cannot be in a fully reclined or lying down position, but must be inclined (i.e. at an angle) relative to the first child support member;

10. Regarding the terms “first reclining position” and “second position,” “first reclining position” and “second position” describe positions of the second child support member relative to the first child support member, with the second position being the more upright. In the first reclining position the second child support member cannot be in a fully reclined or lying down position, but must be inclined (i.e. at an angle) relative to the first child support member;
